

First of all, requiring that address information be publicly available to every identity thief in the world is not so smart. If you're going to require it be entered at least hide it.

To whom it may concern,

On Monday the FCC will likely vote to allow further concentration of media.

I believe this will leave us in a situation where the number of filters through which news is shaped for our consumption drops to a level where the first amendment of the constitution is seriously threatened. The fact that the FCC story is not being covered by the networks, CNN or Fox makes my point.

I believe that lack of access to local press is a serious threat.

One trivial

example-when Clear Channel (out of Austin TX) owns 1200 radio stations it has the power to orchestrate a Dixie Chick "boycott" because it manages the play lists of all 1200 of those stations. When Rupert Murdoch aka Fox Television owns the newspapers and multiple local TV franchises in a town, allowable under the new ruling- all of the local news will look and read like the Fox coverage you saw during the war on Iraq.

Those on the left and right recognize this threat to free speech and the first amendment. From NRA to the Ms Foundation, these strange bedfellows have come together to voice grave concerns over this ruling.

I agree. Please do not put this ruling into effect.

Thank you for your attention
